

Good Housekeeping Award for Women in Government and Good Housekeeping/Wyeth Award for Women's Health

★ Help us find our eight award winners for 2004!

Any woman in government – elected or appointed, career civil servant or member of the armed services, serving in federal, state or local government – is eligible. Nominees may be recommended for a specific achievement, program, or project or for a career which demonstrates how women in government can change our lives for the better. (Read about past winners at www.cawp.rutgers.edu.)

A selection panel of distinguished leaders will judge the nominations, with Good Housekeeping selecting the final winners of one award of $25,000 and six awards of $2,500 each. In addition, the Good Housekeeping/Wyeth Award for Women's Health carries an award of $25,000 for a woman in government whose program or achievement advances the status of women's health. Nominees whose work addresses women's health will be considered for both the Wyeth Award and the Good Housekeeping Awards.

★ Winners will be announced in the July issue of the magazine, available in June 2004.

Nominees will not be notified directly unless chosen to receive an award. Nominators will be advised in late spring if their nominees have not been selected.
